WORLD LIST OF CURRENT BEEKEEPING JOURNALS

PREFACE

This list includes 101 beekeeping journals at present being published regularly; it has been compiled in response to requests made at the meeting of Editors of beekeeping journals held in 1954 at the XV International Beekeeping Congress in Copenhagen. It is believed to be fairly complete, except that it does not include a number of journals with a small and purely local circulation. I hope that Editors and others using the List will send me particulars of any journals which have been overlooked, and also the items indicated as unknown, and any corrections.

The system of numbering used will allow the convenient numbering of any journals added in future supplements, and also the easy publication of additional information about the journals listed here, as and when there is a demand for it (e.g., whether contributions are invited, and whether payment is made for them).

A more comprehensive bibliographical list covering both past and present journals, and giving the holdings of each in some of the more important libraries, is in preparation. I shall be glad to hear from any who would be interested in helping with this work.

The list of currencies on page 12 is included for the convenience of readers, but any of the rates quoted should be checked before payment is made in the currency concerned.

Almost all the journals listed here are received regularly by the Bee Research Association Library (see item 7 below). The publishers of other journals are invited to apply for an exchange between their journals and Bee World, which is published by the Bee Research Association.

Woodside House, Chalfont Heights,
Gerrards Cross, Bucks.
9th December 1955
